Moore-ditch?

Falſ. Thou haſt the moſt unſavory ſmiles, and art indeede the moſt comparative raſcalleſt ſweet yong Prince. But Hall, I prethee trouble me no more with vanity, I would to God thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought: an old Lord of the counſell rated me the other day in the ſtreete about you ſir; but I mark't him not, and yet he talkt very wiſely; but I regarded him not, and yet he talkt wiſely, in the ſtreete too.

Prin. Thou didſt well: for wiſedome cries out in the ſtreets, and no man regards it.

Falſ. O thou haſt damnable Iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a Saint: thou haſt done much harme unto me, Hall God forgive thee for it: Before I knew thee, Hall, I knew nothing, and now am I, if a man ſhould ſpeake truely, little better then one of the wicked: I muſt give over this life; and I will give it over: By the Lord and I doe not, I am a villaine: i'le be damned for never a Kings ſon in Chriſtendome.

Prin. Where ſhall we take a purſe to morrow, Iacke?

Fal. Zounds, where thou wilt, Lad, i'le make one: and I doe not, call me villaine, and baffell me.

Prin. I ſee a good amendment of life in thee; from praying, to Purſe-taking.

Falſ. Why, Hall; 'tis my vocation, Hall: 'tis no ſin for a man to labour in his vocation. Enter Poynes.

Poy. Now ſhall we know if Gads-hill have ſet a match: O, if a man were to be ſaved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? This is the moſt omnipotent Villaine that ever cry'd, Stand to a true man.

Prin. Good morrow Ned.

Poy. Good morrow ſweete Hall. What ſayes Mounſieur Remorſe? What ſayes ſir Iohn Sacke and Sugar, Iacke? How agrees the Divell and thee about thy ſoule, that thou ſoldeſt him on good Friday laſt, for a cup of Madera and a cold Capons legge?

Prin. Sir Iohn ſtands to his word, the Divell ſhall have his bargaine, for he was never a breaker of Proverbs: he will give the Divell his due.

Poy.

Poines. Then art thou damn'd for keeping th
the devill.

Prince. Elſe he had been damn'd for cozening

Poy. But my lads, my lads, to morrow morn clock early at Gads-hill, there are pilgrimes goi

Poy. You will, chops?

Falſ. Hall, wilt thou make one?

Prin. Who, I rob? I a thief? not I by my faith

Fal. Ther's neither honeſty, manhood, nor goo in thee; nor thou cameſt not of the blood-royall, not ſtand for ten ſhillings.

Prin. Well, then once in my dayes Ile be a ma
